How does a surprise road trip work?

Pick a Date

We recommend doing the trip within 6 months of receiving this road trip. Pay close attention to the 'When To Go' within the 'Navigating the Road' section of this booklet.

Get Ready

The only requirement is having a vehicle, GPS and a driver. The trip is completely self-guided, so nothing needs to be booked in advance.

Check Updates

Before leaving, please check travel updates on our website. This will provide you with any major changes to the itinerary.

Pack Your Bag

Please refer to the 'What to Pack' list in this booklet for items we recommend bringing with you.

Hit the Road!

Don't open the first envelope until you're ready to leave. Once you're finished at the first stop, you can open the second envelope. Four stops are included within your road trip.

Your day ahead! Without giving away too many details.

We often include a variety of recommendations at each stop. You do not have to go to all of them, pick and choose what works best for you and your travel mates. If you can't get through all of the stops during the day - come back and explore them at a later date!

Land Acknowledgement

We recognize that some of the stops listed in this trip date back to a time when not everyone was free. These places also exist on the traditional and ancestral territories of Indigenous peoples who have stewarded this land for generations.

As we acknowledge both the history of slavery and the impact of colonization, we recognize the profound inequalities and systemic racism these legacies have bred. These horrific institutions dehumanized millions and displaced countless Indigenous peoples, leaving lasting social, economic, and cultural consequences. Confronting these truths allows us to reflect, foster dialogue, and work towards a more just society. As you travel, we encourage you to inquire about this history, ask sites to prominently display their history and honor the Indigenous lands on which they stand, ensuring these histories are neither overlooked nor diminished.
